ASSENT PROCEDURES – age 5-12
Institute for Creativity, Arts, and Technology

Explanation offered to the child:

At the ICAT workshop, the people who work there will be watching to see what you do. They are trying to learn about how people learn. They might sometimes ask you questions about what you are doing. They might take your picture or take a video of what you do. After the workshop, you get the chance to tell them what you thought about it.

You don't have to answer their questions if you don't want to, and you can stop participating if you want to.

Does this sound all right to you?
